

The participants of MultiRights Summer Institute, June 2013

After a process of selecting the strongest candidates, we are happy to welcome such a distinguished group of scholars to our MultiRights Summer Institute in Oslo June 8-22. The selected participants and their intended research topics are presented below.

- Daniel W. Hill Jr. He is an Assistant Professor at the Department of International Affairs at the University of Georgia, Athens, Georgia. His topic for MultiRights is: How domestic legal protection is a condition for the impact of human rights treaties on personal integrity rights.
- Edzia Carvalho. She is a Lecturer in Politics in the School of Social Sciences at the University of Dundee. Her topic for MultiRights is: Special Procedures of the UN Human Rights Council and State Protection of Human Rights.
- Courtenay R. Conrad. She is an Assistant Professor at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Her topic for MultiRights is: The Conflicting Effects of International Law, a research she will do together with Emily Hencken Ritter, who is also a participant of our Summer Institute. They will propose a new theory that brings together two divergent approaches to explaining rights violations.
- Jillienne E. Haglund. She is a Ph.D. Candidate at the Department of Political Science at Florida State University. For MultiRights she will examine explanatory variables that condition the effectiveness of regional court decisions in improving human rights outcomes.
- Jasper Krommendijk. He is a PhD Researcher in the Faculty of Law at Maastricht University. His topic for MultiRights is: The impact and effectiveness of the recommendations of the UN human rights treaty bodies in The Netherlands, New Zealand and Finland.
- Ari Shaw. He is a Ph.D. Researcher at the Department of Political Science Northwestern University. His topic for MultiRights is: Why does an international human rights framework augment the domestic political efficacy of rights-based mobilization in some cases and not in others?
- Theresa Squatrito. She is a Post-Doctoral Research Fellow at Stockholm University. Her topic for MultiRights is: Domestic institutionalization of European Human Rights Law through National Parliament.
- Emily Hencken Ritter. She is an Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Alabama. Her topic for MultiRights is: Human Rights Violations and International Courts: Autonomy versus Power.
- Yonatan Lupu. He is a Postdoctoral Research Associate at the Niehaus Center for Globalization and Governance at Princeton University. His topic for MultiRights is: Veto Players and the Effects of International Human Rights Agreements.
- Todd Landman. He is a Professor of Government and Director of the Institute for Democracy and Conflict Resolution at the University of Essex. His topic for MultiRights, writing together with Dr. Dorothea Farquhar, is: On the Quantification of Human Rights Law.